

Since its inception in 2000, Appalachian Environmental Resources, Inc. has become a leading environmental, health and safety services provider in the southeast region. Appalachian Environmental Resources, Inc. has achieved steady growth, both geographically and in terms of service offerings, through the addition of personnel and in response to client needs. Appalachian Environmental Resources' team of experts is experienced in all aspects of environmental compliance and permitting, waste management, workplace safety, and industrial hygiene. Their combined experience includes extensive work in the fields of chemistry, biology, environmental science, industrial hygiene and regulatory compliance assurance. We have specialists in wastewater treatment, air quality, waste management, environmental surveys, and health and safety program development and implementation.

We continue to enhance our services and expand our geographic reach through organic growth. Today, Appalachian Environmental Resources, Inc. provides environmental-related services for clients with facilities in the southeastern region of the United States as well as Kansas, Missouri, California, Indiana and Maryland. We provide solutions for all aspects of environmental permitting and compliance, the proper management of waste, and workplace safety concerns for industries and businesses. Not only do these solutions result in cost savings for the customer, but they can also relieve the burden created by compliance regulations that is often carried by Plant Managers, Health and Safety Managers, Human Resources Managers, or business owners, all of whom already have many other responsibilities.

Our team evaluates each customer's needs before recommending our services. Each company is unique in its environmental and OSHA requirements, and Appalachian Environmental Resources, Inc. has the resources to provide each customer exactly what it needs — no more and no less. We develop continuing partnerships with our customers, re-evaluating their compliance requirements as they grow and change.

Appalachian Environmental Resources, Inc. provides solutions to your environmental concerns.
